Call for Applications

Closing Date:
Thursday 20 Jan 2022, 17:00 (UK time)

Sociology is seeking new Editorial Board Members to serve from February 2022 to December 2024.

About the Board

The Sociology Editorial Board is a working board, involved in reviewing submissions and also in the direction of the journal. Members review an average of 12 papers per year, depending on the articles being submitted to the journal. In addition to reviewing, there are regular opportunities for board members to volunteer to take part in various projects that contribute to the running of the journal. The Editorial Board meets virtually twice a year.

The Board invites applications involving any areas of methodological, theoretical and empirical expertise, though candidates with expertise in the following areas are particularly needed:

- Sociology of work (employment, labour, etc.)
- Economic sociology
- Sociological theory (both Northern and Southern)
- Families/relationships/personal life
- Inequalities/social stratification
- Quantitative methods

Criteria for Application

Prospective Editorial Board members should:

- be a BSA member or join the BSA at time of nomination
- have experience of being published in refereed journals
- have refereed a minimum of five articles for peer-review journals
- not be members of the Work, Employment and Society Editorial Board

As well as reviewing in their own areas of expertise, board members may also be asked to review in a generalist capacity. Previous experience of reviewing is essential to the role for this reason.

Sociology welcomes members from any cultural or academic background to contribute to the diversity of research published by the journal.

Call for Applications

Closing Date:

Thursday 20 Jan 2022, 17:00 (UK time)

The Board is not able to accept more than two Board Members from the same institution on the Board at any one time, which means that currently we cannot accept applications from anyone based at Lancaster University or the University of Kent. We also cannot accept candidates from the same institution as the Editorial Team - the University of Surrey.

We also wish to note that candidates do not need an academic affiliation to be eligible. Colleagues working as independent sociologists, between academic posts or outside of the academic context are very welcome to apply.

How to apply:

The online application form can be found online on the BSA website,
<https://www.britisoc.co.uk/opportunities/publications-opportunities/>

Please complete your application by Thursday 20 January 2022.

If you have any queries about the role or your eligibility, please contact Professor Tim Strangleman, Chair of the Editorial Board via sociology.journal@britsoc.org.uk
